

Abacadabra!

Questions and Answers-Season 2-Show 1

Many illusionists use misdirection to trick their audiences.

One illusionist, born in 1849, was a master of misdirection. In fact, some believe he was the inspiration for the character of the wizard in L. Frank Baum's book, "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz".

Name this illusionist!

- (A) Tom Stone
- (B) Derek Dingle
- (C) Ed Marlo
- > (D) Harry Keller

Las Vegas has seen many magicians come and go.

This question may burden you, but which of these magicians worked there for 19 years, appearing before an estimated five-million people?

- (A) David Acer
- (B) Uri Geller
- (C) Val Valantino
- > (D) Lance Burton

Another master of misdirection is this illusionist with the same name as a character in a novel by Charles Dickens. He has performed live on stage, as well as in T.V. specials. He once made the Statue of Liberty disappear.

Who is he?

David Copperfield

Did I really pull that quarter from your ear?
Hiding small objects from view in my hand is called what?

"Palming"